Mary lived in a small village. One morning, her father took her to her uncle's home in a town. She had a good time there. Before Mary left in the morning, her uncle gave her a jar and said, "There's some candy in it, you may put your hand into the jar and take some when you want to eat it." Mary looked at the jar when she was on the train. It has a long and small neck. She put her hand into the jar and took one piece. After a while, she put her hand into the jar and wanted to take five pieces. But she couldn't get her hand out. She turned her hand again and again. At last she let four pieces go off. Then she could pull her hand out of the jar.
